

Written Comments

When I began at C.T., two years ago, I was only a freshman. I chose to become part of C.T. because I wanted to graduate early. When I first signed up, I was afraid to attend here because I had heard so many horrible stories. Then I came to speak with Government Group, and I was so nervous I think I bit my tongue nearly six times throughout the meeting. Once I got through that, I began class and met everybody. I was so amazed at the friendliness of the staff that my fears seemed to disappear. Right away I noticed that the environment was cozy and secure.

When I entered Julie's class and sat at her desk, I felt very welcome. We went over my transcripts and I immediately began working in my classes. I didn't have to sit through a lecture with some teacher drilling on some story that was not at all relevant to the class I was in. I could work at my own pace, and ask Julie for help whenever needed. When break came, the other students introduced themselves and showed me around the school. I realized that my fear of this school when I began was pure silliness.

If anyone ever asked me about C.T. my comments would only be excellent. C.T. is a big family. They help each other, hurt each other and even miss each other when they leave. Attending C.T. has been one of the most extreme adventures of my life, and a lesson in life that I will never forget. C.T. has set the foundation for my life, and I will be very proud the day I graduate from this school.

Amanda Swanson
4/16/01